Our Mission:

Based on our commitment to Catholic social teaching, Catholic Social Services of Montana provides for works of advocacy, compassion, pastoral outreach, education, and social justice.

Merry Christmas and happy holidays!

Wow! What a year. I am so proud of and grateful for the team, volunteers, and all those who supported CSSM this year. Together, we worked across Montana to build families through adoption, support families with young children in need through our Baby Boutiques, and be there for those seeking assistance and guidance with a mental health situation in their life. As you flip through our yearly update, I hope you find inspiration and experience joy in knowing that together, we are able to do this work that enriches the lives of all we serve. Thank you for your generosity of time, prayers, and donations to our charitable work.

God Bless,

Scott Held, Executive Director

"YOUR MENTAL HEALTH AFFECTS YOUR SPIRITUAL HEALTH"

It has been an exciting year for the mental health program. We're excited to share Steve Nash, who works out of our Bozeman office, and Sue Stahley, who works out of our Billings office, have joined Phil Quinn and Michelle Perlick as therapists in our program. To date, the program has:

- ★ Provided counseling and therapy in-person and through telehealth to more than 200 clients of all ages, genders, and other factors.
- ★ These clients live in more than 40 Montana communities and have taken part in nearly 1,800 sessions with our licensed therapists.
- ★ Of these sessions, 42% are discounted in one way or another. This is part of our commitment to being there for everyone, regardless of ability to pay, in their time of need. Many sessions bill at less than half the average cost of a counseling session in Montana.
- ★ Clients have sought help for many different reasons, including marriage and relationship work, anxiety, grief, depression, trauma, and many more.

We're here for you. To get started with a therapist, call (406) 442-4130 or visit www.cssmt.org/contact to message us.

Testimonials

- * Phil is good people. He's one of the only people on my Christmas card list because he's one of the only people I trust to talk to.
-counseling client
- * I'm so appreciative of your generosity. It has been quite difficult to live off of only my husband's paycheck for nine months. I am hoping and praying my unemployment comes to an end soon. (it did, which has helped the client immensely. Hooray!)
-counseling client referencing their drastically discounted session costs

Normalizing the Conversation

This year, the team has spent extensive time traveling across Montana to facilitate conversations and provide educational opportunities on the topic of mental health. It has been wonderful to see and meet so many people, who are all committed to normalizing the conversation around mental health and how important it is to our daily lives. Through education, we are empowering our neighbors to be ready to care for a mental health crisis they may experience in their community.

We're happy to share our Baby Boutiques in Helena and Billings continue to successfully meet the needs of families. By creating a shopping experience for diapers, wipes, clothing, toys, blankets, and other necessities, the volunteers and staff at the Baby Boutiques help "bridge the gap" for families experiencing a shortfall in their finances. This helps provide dignity for the mothers and fathers by giving a "hand-up" instead of a "hand-out," and gives peace of mind to these families, knowing the hygiene of their children is cared for. If you live in Helena or Billings and want to experience the joy of this ministry, we'd love your help as a volunteer! Just give us a call! Both locations also accept donations of diapers, pull-ups, rash cream, and other gently used items.

From Our Adoption Department: Journeys of Hope

Vocation of a Social Worker, a True Calling

While infrequent, from time-to-time we have a case where an expectant mother shows up at the emergency room, actively in labor, saying she cannot keep her baby, wants no connection after the birth, and wishes to sign over custody. While yes, we, as a licensed adoption agency, are taking custody, this incredible responsibility feels like it falls directly to us, the social workers, since we are there to ensure the well-being of the wonderful little blessing of the new baby. The weight of this first hit me when I started at CSSM a decade ago and our Executive Director at the time, Rosemary Miller, said, "Congratulations, it looks like you had a baby!" I sat confused for a minute until it clicked and I realized I was signing all the authorizations for care as if I was the baby's parent!

When a woman chooses to completely put up walls and disconnect from her child, and we take custody, we become that child's parent of sorts. When I, as the social worker, am standing in a dark, quiet NICU room, looking down at this precious gift from God desperately fighting to live, with all the tubes and lines coming and going from them, I suddenly feel the swelling of my heart to care, love, and give this baby the best of everything. The little one needs me, not as a mom, but as the bridge between them and their mom and dad, working hard to find the one adoptive family who has been waiting for them. I have families to call. Families who have been waiting for this call. Families who have been dreaming of the perfect addition to their loving home.

When I walk into a NICU room with a family who has said yes, and all the hospital team lines up to see the first time the adoptive couple lay eyes upon their child, it is like winning the lottery. I see their joy and fear turn into immediate love for the angel in front of them. During this time, the real miracle happens. That sweet baby feels the love of their new parents. The connection, heartbeat, and warmth of a living person: their family. They blossom and the positive physical change that occurs is a sight to behold. To say I feel forever connected to each baby is an understatement. I leave a piece of me with each one of them and in turn, take a piece of them with me for always. This is when I always think, "I truly have the best job in the world." -this is an abridged version of the original piece. The full length piece is available on CSSM's website, at www.cssmt.org.

A Gift of Love

Our hearts overflow with gratitude for the journey that brought our precious Aurora into our lives. After nearly two years of hopeful anticipation, she arrived in February 2024 at 18 months old, instantly filling our home with laughter and light. The joy of her final adoption in December of that year was a moment we'll forever cherish. Now a spunky and thriving three-year-old, Aurora keeps us on our toes and reminds us daily of the incredible gift of adoption. She is a constant source of energy, love, and endless wonder, and we can't imagine our lives without her.
